UNIVERSITY OF BELIZE & UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH FLORIDA

Summer 2011 & Summer 2013

Research Assistant

Public Health research for the Belize Ministry of Health (MOH): conducted a community health needs assessment for underserved population of San Martin. Gain practical knowledge on the process of conducting research in a global setting. Obtained hands-on experience in the development and design of a survey instrument, identified adjustments needed after piloting the survey instrument & collected quantitative and qualitative data from over 150 households. The information obtained was analyzed using Epidemiological tools (Epi Info) to identify public health needs of the population for the future development of an intervention project. Meet cross-cutting competencies that are expected of public health practitioners. The collection, management and organization of data were vital for obtaining accurate epidemiological information from households in the area. This study provided information to the Belize MOH, the Belize National Emergency Management Organization (NEMO), and the University of Belize. The data collected was beneficial for the target population to help facilitate the development of programs to improve the overall quality of life for those in San Martin.

Course Design & Development

- Enhanced General Education: Restructuring the Disaster by Design course as a High Impact Practice (HIP) course that meets the requirements for the Ethical Reasoning and Civic Engagement (ERCE) tier of the Enhanced General Education at the University of South Florida.
- Global Pathways: Restructuring of our undergraduate minor to include significant global content that provides students with an opportunity to practice and apply global competencies throughout the program. PHC 4376 Disaster by Design, PHC 4250 Crisis Leadership in Disasters, PHC 4188 Public Health Emergencies in Large Populations, and the PHC 4944 Public Health in Japan courses are certified as Global Citizens Project (GCP) courses.
- Course Design & Development: International Post-Disaster Recovery: Peacebuilding and Peacekeeping, and Humanitarian Crisis: Health & Gender Issues, Public Health Emergencies in Large Populations, Homeland Security/Preparedness, Community Engagement in Public Health Preparedness, Disaster by Design, Planning for Emergencies, and Crisis Leadership. Assisted with course content for Psychology of Fear & Mental Health in Disasters.
- Study Abroad Course Design: Coordinated and designed the International Field School in Public Health course hosted in Belize, including the development of the course proposal & program budget, identified agencies and organizations for the students to meet with during the field school, logistics for the students travel to Belize, and coordination with graduate students conducting their field experience in Belize during our time in the country. Supported the course design and served as co-Instructor for the Public Health in Japan Study Abroad course for Summer 2019. Developed the course and served as lead Instructor for the Public Health in Japan Study Abroad course in for Summer 2023.
